The Development of Love

“What shall prevent God from doing that which He will in the soul that is resigned, annihilated, and detached?” This statement of St. John of the Cross makes you understand that God has an immense desire to work in your soul, to lead you to sanctity and to union with Himself, provided you commit yourself into His hands, despoiled of every attachment, annihilated in your self-love, entirely docile, malleable, and adaptable to His action. The Lord comes to your assistance with purifying trials in order to empty you of self, to detach you from creatures, to immerse you of self, to detach you from creatures, to immerse you in true humility, but at the same time He helps you to grow in love, the strong bond which must unite you to Him. All the work which God accomplishes in your soul is done in view of making you advance in this virtue; exterior and interior trials, humiliations, powerlessness, aridity, struggles, and tempests are meant in the divine plan to extinguish the illusory fires of self-love, pride, earthly affections, and all other irregular passions, so that only one fire may burn within you, ever more intensely and strongly, the fire of charity.

The more the Lord purifies you, the more your heart will be freed from all dross and become capable of concentrating all its affection upon Him. Walk, then, in this way by accepting purification in view of a deeper love, and by orientating your whole spiritual life toward the exercise of love. What you suffer, suffer for love, that is, suffer it willingly, without rebellion or complaint, and then, in the measure that your soul is humbled, despoiled, and mortified, it will also be clothed with charity. The trials which God sends you have the purpose not only of purifying your heart, but also of dilating it in charity. They aim at deepening your capacity for love; not, certainly, a sensible love, but a powerful love of the will, which tends toward God through pure benevolence, independent of all personal consolation, its sole pursuit being His glory and good pleasure.

By means of purifying trials, “God secretly teaches the soul and instructs it in the perfection of love.” Above all, He teaches it to love independently of all happiness and joy, even depriving it of that joy, though legitimate and spontaneous, which proceeds from the consciousness of its own love. The soul that is not yet wholly purified could become attached to this joy, so God withdraws it entirely; in the thick darkness the soul feels that it no longer loves; dry aridity extinguishes all joy and sweetness, and it is constrained to go forward by a pure act of the will. Instead of taking complacency in its own love, which henceforth it no longer feels, the soul is profoundly afflicted by the tormenting doubt that it no longer knows how to love, and to combat this doubt, it can only apply itself with all its might to performing the works of love, that is, embracing generously every labor, every sacrifice that may please God. In this way, its love matures, becoming purer and stronger: purer, because it is not mixed with any personal consolation; stronger, because it urges the soul to more generous labors. In this state, the soul adheres to God by a simple act of the will, and herein the substance of love consists: it wills good to God solely because He is the supreme, infinitely lovable Good; it desires Him alone and serves Him alone, fulfilling all His divine will without any return on self, without seeking any joy or spiritual consolation. The soul is no longer preoccupied with enjoying His love, or with receiving; its one solicitude is to give, to give itself, to give pleasure to God.

Not God’s Type

Ordway, an atheist academic, was convinced that faith was superstitious nonsense. As a well-educated English professor, she saw no need for just-so-stories about God. Secure in her fortress of atheism, she was safe (or so she thought) from any assault by irrational faith.

So what happened? How did she come to “lay down her arms” in surrender to Christ and then, a few years later, enter the Catholic Church?

This is the moving account of her unusual journey. It is the story of an academic becoming convinced of the truth of Christianity on rational grounds—but also the account of God’s grace acting in and through her imagination.

It is the tale of an unfolding, developing relationship with God—told with directness and honesty—and of a painful surrender at the foot of the Cross. It is the account of a lifelong, transformative love of reading and the story of how a competitive fencer put down her sabre to pick up the sword of the Spirit.

Above all, this book is a tale of grace, acting in and through human beings but always issuing from God and leading back to him. And it is the story of a woman being brought home.

On Indulgences

In the new Handbook of indulgences there are 70 entries of prayers and good works enriched with plenary and/or partial indulgences. Worthy of special mention are the four following. Keeping in mind that only one plenary indulgence can be gained on one and the same day, here are those concessions:

1. A plenary indulgence is granted to one of the faithful who visits the Blessed Sacrament to adore the same for at least half an hour.
2. A plenary indulgence is granted to one of the faithful who spends at least half an hour in reading Sacred Scripture with the veneration due to the divine word and in the form of spiritual reading.
3. A plenary indulgence is granted to one of the faithful who performs the pious exercise of the Way of the Cross. One who is prevented from making the stations can gain the same plenary indulgence by devoting at least half an hour to spiritual reading and meditation on the Passion and death of our Lord Jesus Christ.
4. A plenary indulgence is granted to one of the faithful who recites the rosary of at least five decades with meditation on the respective mysteries in a church or a public oratory, or in a family, or in a religious community, or in some pious Association. The five decades are to be said in continuity and if said in public the respective mystery is to be announced before each decade.

In all these cases an Our Father and Hail Mary or some other prayers of one’s choice are to be said for the Pope’s intentions. For in order to gain a plenary indulgence four things are necessary: 1. The performance of the work to which the indulgence is attached. 2. Sacramental confession. 3. Eucharistic Communion. 4. Prayer for the intention of the Supreme Pontiff. In addition to this it is required that all attachment to sin, even venial sin, be absent.
