Examination of Conscience

To insure an orderly and progressive growth in the spiritual life, we must know ourselves. We have to consider our sins, our weak points, our evil tendencies, as well as the progress we have already made, the favorable results we have attained, and our inclinations to good. This knowledge of our interior state is obtained through the examination of conscience. The examen considered in this way becomes one of the most important exercises of the spiritual life, since its object is to help the soul to rid itself of everything that might obstruct or delay its journey to God, and to stimulate it to quicken its pace toward Him. Just as we cannot wage war with an unknown enemy, or make conquest of an unknown region, in the same way it is impossible to fight the evil in ourselves if we have not previously identified it. We can never attain sanctity if we have not looked for an efficacious means of acquiring it. In other words, the examination of conscience attains its end when the soul who has faithfully practiced this exercise can say to itself: these are the inclinations which I must watch more carefully to avoid falling into sin; these, the weak points which I must strengthen; these are the virtues that I must practice most of all. In this way the soul will be able to formulate practical, firm resolutions which will then become the special subject of its subsequent examinations.

It is clear that we must first recognize and combat any tendencies which could lead us to mortal sin, but then, those that could bring us to venial sin or to simple voluntary imperfections must be similarly treated. Everything that constitutes a deliberate fault must be progressively and energetically rooted out of the soul which aspires to divine union.

Instead of trying to seek out all the faults it has committed, the soul living an interior life—one we assume to be free by now from mortal sin—should fix its attention on the degree to which its faults have been voluntary, even in the case of slight imperfections, because it is these deliberate faults that present the greatest obstacle to spiritual progress and to union with God. The soul must carefully investigate the cause of and the motive for these failures. It must realize that while its exterior faults are of various kinds—faults against charity, for example, or patience, or obedience, or sincerity—all of them, nevertheless, have one and the same cause, one common root which may be, for example, pride or sloth. It is precisely against this root of our sins and imperfections that we must direct our efforts, not simply to lessen it by mortification, but rather to fight it directly by the increase of the opposite virtues in ourselves. In other words, we must struggle against our dominant passion or fault; this is very important, for by aiming to destroy the evil at its root, we eliminate at the same time many actual faults. (Divine Intimacy Fr. Gabriel of St. Mary Magdalen)

From the Pastor

If we aren't doing it already, we need to pray hard for the success of the midterm elections that will take place in November of this year, and we need to get others to pray. There is a cultural war going on in our county between those who promote traditional Christian values and those who promote the contrary. It's really a war between good and evil. Those who promote evil (e.g., abortion, "same-sex marriage," transgenderism, assisted suicide, religious intolerance, socialism, etc.) often attempt to intimidate those who promote the good by telling them: "Don't force your morality upon us." They, on the other hand, have no inhibitions about forcing their immorality upon everyone else. There can be no compromise between the two groups. If we want the good to prevail we must use every legitimate means to bring it about. Prayer is first, of course. We especially recommend attendance at Mass as often as possible and the praying of the Rosary daily. Something else many of can do is to vote for candidates who will best uphold traditional Christian values. We need to get the message out to people that the best candidates are not those who promise financial security; but, rather, those who will uphold traditional Christian moral values. And, by the way, upholding traditional Christian moral values is the best way to ensure financial security, as well.

Prayer to St. Joseph

V. He made him lord of his house.
 R. And prince over all his possessions.

Let us pray:

O God, in Thy marvelous providence, Thou hast deigned to choose St. Joseph to be the spouse of Thy most holy Mother. We ask Thee to grant that we may deserve to have him for our intercessor in heaven, whom on earth we venerate as our protector; who livest and reignest forever and ever. Amen.

Marian Consecration

Preparation will begin on Tuesday, Feb. 20, for those who would like to consecrate themselves (or, to renew their consecration) to Jesus through Mary according to the method of St. Louis de Montfort. A sermon will be preached on some aspect of the consecration every Tuesday at the 6:30 p.m. Mass until the consecration is made on Palm Sunday, March 25. Why March 25th? March 25th is the feast of the Annunciation, the day God entrusted Himself to the care of the Blessed Virgin Mary. However, because it falls on Palm Sunday this year, it won't be celebrated liturgically until after Easter.

Extra Confession Times During Lent

Throughout Lent, the priests of St. Stephen's will make themselves available to hear confessions from 6 p.m. to 7:30 p.m., Monday through Saturday. Please spread the word to those who do not come regularly to St. Stephen's, but would like to go to confession.

Please Keep in Your Prayers ...
